Not All Exorcists are Equal....One is Marked
When defrocked ex-priest, Jimmy Holiday, agrees to help an old friend with his sick daughter, he doesnt expect the horrors that await him. Blackmoor, his friends new residence, rests upon the outskirts of the town of Sorrows Point. The mansions history of magic, mayhem, and death makes it almost a living thing a haunted mansion straight out of a Stephen King novel. Jimmy must decide if the young girl, Lucy, is only ill, or if the haunting of the house and her apparent possession are real. After the house appears to affect him as well with colors of magic dancing before his eyes, rooms warded by a witch, and a ring of power in his voice, Jimmy is met by a transient who tells him he has the Mark. Whatever being marked means, Jimmy doesn't care. All he wants to do is help Lucy. But, helping Lucy means performing an exorcism. Presentation de l'auteur Not All Exorcists are Equal.... Biographie de l'auteur Named one of the Examiner's 2014 Women in Horror: 93 Horror Authors You Need to Read Right Now, Danielle DeVor has been spinning the spider webs, or rather, the keyboard for more frights and oddities. She spent her early years fantasizing about vampires and watching "Salem's Lot" far too many times. When not writing and reading about weird things, you will find her hanging out at the nearest coffee shop, enjoying a mocha frappuccino. <http://www.danielledevor.com>
