Description :

Prsentation de l'diteurAn Argentinian from Buenos Aires, Christian Pereira, sails in Antarctica. It is the end of February and other sailors are heading home as winter approaches the continent. One sleepless night he picks up a book that he has found in his attic at home. Browsing through the text about the Western Himalayas, his eyes get fixed on the mysterious death of a British explorer and spy who was sent out by the Brits to influence a commercial treaty by which the entire Central Asia would open for trade. He later identifies a connection between the man and his great grandfather. Knowing the truth turns into an obsession. The Antarctic landscape also slowly starts to influence Christian. Sneaking into a research station in search for food one night, he accidentally runs into Fyodor, an unpredictable Russian scientist with a mysterious past, who forces Christian to give him a lift on his boat to complete his secret scientific study. This is only the beginning of a journey that turns out to be Christians biggest challenge yet.Prsentation de l'diteurAn Argentinian from Buenos Aires, Christian Pereira, sails in Antarctica.
