Description :

Prsentation de l'diteurMystery. Menace. Mistrust.South-west France, 1999.An ancient house creaks with secrets. The dead owners niece hunts answers. Will the new owner be her friend or foe?Chantal is lonely and bruised by failure. Arriving in France to arrange Aunt Jeanne's funeral, she discovers Jeanne had sold her lovingly preserved medieval home. Mystified, Chantal embarks on a search for the truth. Soon she is menaced by maddening visions at night and dangerous mishaps by day.Forced into a wary alliance with Berenger, the new owner, and her top suspect, Chantal finds her heart faces even more danger than her body and mind. If Berenger isn't the modern villain, could the house be guarding its Cathar secrets by trying to drive her mad? For fans of Mary Stewart and Victoria Holt, this modern Gothic has a fast-paced, twisting plot with a strong sense of local atmosphere. Old places, lost secrets, family history: these elements infuse her writing, something she attributes to being adopted and not meeting a blood relative till her mid-twenties. Her love of writing stories emerged in primary school, and when eventually, she learned that her by-blood uncle and great grandfather had been the storytellers in their communities, it made perfect sense. Sarah grew up in the Far East, UK and southern France but now lives in a very young country - New Zealand - with her husband and two teenage children.
